

Divine Love Newsletter

Volume 12, No. 3

May 2026

FROM THE EDITORS

We are pleased to bring you another issue of the Divine Love Newsletter. May the teachings, reflections, creative offerings, and community updates in these pages bring comfort, encouragement, and renewed inspiration as you continue on the path of Divine Love and soul transformation.

In this issue:

- Dealing with the Chaos in the World and Other Challenges – Compiled by Eva Peck, this feature gathers thoughtful responses to a community member facing anxiety over world events, financial pressures, family struggles, and difficulties in prayer. The contributors offer reassurance, practical spiritual encouragement, and reminders of the power of trust, gratitude, stillness, and heartfelt prayer in challenging times.
- A More Perfect At-onement – Ron Shoemaker reflects on how spiritual truth becomes clearer as the soul grows in Divine Love. Drawing on the Padgett and Samuels Messages, he revisits the question of the second withdrawal of Divine Love and offers a hopeful perspective on God’s mercy, ongoing revelation, and the soul’s ever-deepening at-onement with the Father.
- Not Being a Bystander in Your Own Life – Colin Mackay explores the difference between the material mind and the soul, showing how the mind gradually yields to the soul’s higher awareness as Divine Love transforms our being. He reminds us that true spiritual awakening comes not merely through ideas, but through the soul’s living experience of God.
- A Continuing Journey into Divine Love – Ron Henderson introduces a new four-book spiritual series centered on prayer, Divine Love, compassion, and humility, that he compiled from Augustine’s messages. He presents these works as steps on a living path of soul awakening and transformation rather than simply books to be read.
- Two New Podcasts – Bill Frase announces two new podcast offerings: Wake-Up Call for the Soul, featuring conversations on spirituality, consciousness, and truth, and Prayers for a New World, offering a new Divine Love prayer each day.
- Praying and Sharing Across the Miles – Information is provided on Circles of Light, prayer gatherings, and other opportunities for connection, healing, and spiritual growth within the Divine Love community.
- Poetry Corner – Debra Taylor shares the poem “Butterfly,” a light and joyful expression of beauty and upliftment.
- Community News and Divine Love Resources – These sections highlight new videos, writings, music, websites, audiobooks, and other offerings from the Divine Love community, along with helpful resources for study, prayer, outreach, and sharing the Padgett Messages.

We are greatly blessed to know, while still on earth, of the availability of God’s Divine Love. Many souls experience long periods of darkness in the spirit world when their expectations of the afterlife are not fulfilled. For some, it takes many years to release the false beliefs that hinder the soul’s progression through the spheres. In a message received from Reverend Fontaine, he shares with his daughter that “even though her mother will not believe, yet some of the things that I have said will find a lodgment in your memory, which will come with her to the spirit world, and help her in her disappointment in not having her expectations met.” It matters not how the truth is received, but that the truth is shared.

DEALING WITH THE CHAOS IN THE WORLD AND OTHER CHALLENGES (EVA PECK, COMPILER)

Editorial Introduction

This article is a compilation of responses to a member of WhatsApp Conversations sharing their spiritual struggles with the world and personal challenges. We thought it would be helpful to all our readers.

Heartfelt Concerns

I see so much chaos in the world right now including the war, gasoline prices rising with possible rationing, wondering what that might mean for food production in the coming months and years, my brother's marriage falling apart, my partner's business struggling, concerns about paying the mortgage. With all this going on, I'm having a hard time finding my center! Prayer feels a bit hard as I can't seem to sit and focus, so I do mini prayers throughout the day instead. I don't feel like it's enough and I'm sad! Sometimes I feel like I need some tangible evidence that this is all real, but I do feel a calming presence when I do my mini prayers! I wish I knew what to do to get through these times. Does anyone else feel a bit lost sometimes too?

Common Experiences and Ways to Deal with Them

I wouldn't say that I feel a bit lost sometimes, it's more like I struggle to know the guidance I receive. I can feel the angels' presence and know they are helping me. I just am not always sure what they are trying to communicate to me. It's hard to know what is guidance, maybe it's just a sense of "that might be a good thing / direction to head towards". It would be nice to have it spelled out for us!

Thank you for helping me remember the struggles I/we had when young. Having been without a job for more than a year, I know what struggles are, but also that God's ways are unbelievable. At the time I had to make my own furniture as my girlfriend and I planned to get married. Through the help of a friend of my future mother-in-law, I was offered a temporary job, which a year later became a steady job. What I have learned in my life is that even your unspoken prayers are heard. God's ways are unpredictable, but He will help in your struggles as He did in ours.

Feeling a bit lost is quite normal, because we don't always have a clear plan to follow. But feeling sometimes "solutionless" (if that's a word) is familiar to me as well. Leaving all the tech (phones, computers) and distractions consciously for a while and taking a 10-30-minute prayer walk, where I talk to the Father, pray for guidance/solutions/answers and try to listen (also with my heart/soul area), relax, be in an open state to Him, pray for more of His Love, thank Him for opportunities, believe in possible positive changes (which can happen "miraculously" or "as a lovely coincidence"). This openness and interaction with Him usually help me to get into a better state of being. In turn, this allows for good things to happen and more blessings to flow (either felt or perceived in change of circumstances). We are offered help and guidance every day. But sometimes the guidance can be "You are already on the right track" or "don't forget to be loving to yourself" and other simple truths.

The financial aspects are hitting hard everywhere in the world right now, but what has again helped me has been prayers for extra work I could do. These prayers typically get answered in ways where people "randomly" discover my services or website/Facebook page and contact me; or some old acquaintance calls me and asks for help.

Sure, I can relate to feeling a bit lost. Allow me to gently offer an answer in Christian terminology. Let us place the concerning issues in reverse hierarchy. A rock thrown into a river or pond creates ripples that become bigger as they move outwards but at some point, the force dissipates. However, if the original ripple meets another ripple, it will flow back to the center. An opposing or greater force accomplished this.

None of the struggles you list can be settled or shifted without Divine intervention. Our Father loves us in an infinite way. I believe that His answers to our prayers are always Yes! and Amen! But the Bible teaches us to examine how we pray.

Do we pray in a relationship? Do we pray to God as Father? Do we pray in a covenant relationship? Do we reach out to others to join us in prayer? The Bible promises that there is power when two or more pray in agreement and when a righteous person prays. You are greatly loved and help is abounding for you. Bless every step that leads you into a real experience of His love for you.

The Israelites in the desert praised God for His powerful hand that made them victorious in battle after battle. Jesus' disciples and other people who received healing met the God who forgives, reconciles and renews! We pray deeply to know Him as Father and giver of every good and perfect gift. Trust Him with every care and He is able to bring good out of all situations and circumstances.

Despite all the negative issues in my life that don't seem to have answers, somewhere deep within myself I know that our Heavenly Father has my back and won't abandon me no matter what. Trust your inner senses.

I too struggle hard to focus on God. Therefore, it's important to remember, trust, believe and keep our faith that all is being moved around in our lives to assist us in exploring new ways and methods of survival. That will greatly enhance our ability to live a simpler life and understand that we never needed all these materialistic items to free us or bring us joy, happiness and pleasure. Never give up! God holds each of us in His loving arms of Divine Love.

Despite issues we are dealing with, we need to be strong so that others will be able to turn to us and be strengthened and upheld. We have increased gas prices. But lots of others do not have water to drink. We are looking for a job but lots of others are looking for food. We worry about what will come tomorrow. Others may not even want a tomorrow. When you feel things are bad, think of those worse off than you and just thank God. He will see you through. Our job as seekers of Divine Love is to be strong in these times and pray with a grateful and thankful heart. Everyone is going through some sort of struggle. But when the going gets tough, Divine Love seekers get praying.

I can certainly understand your struggles when the world feels as though it is caving in on you and you have no idea what to do. I've learned from experience that sometimes there is nothing for me to do. I just need to be still in God and wait for that quiet voice to guide me.

What I have found regarding ailments and earthly survival conditions has all to do with the laws of attraction and desire. In the law of attraction, you ask God in earnest prayer to show you your ways of error – your sins. Persist at this and you will see things start coming up. Then ask God for His help in removing the errors that came up. This changes your law of attraction right away, as well as opening you up to receiving more of the Father's Divine Love.

We live mainly in the mind, which is normal here on the earth plane. The mind says one thing, but the soul is not on that page. That's where the law of desire comes in. Let the things you wish for come from a deep soulful emotion of love. Have you ever heard: "you never get what you want, you only get what you picture"? It's about picturing with your heart (soul), not mind. Another wise man said: "If you could only stay 51% positive in your day, you could move mountains." The right combination of these two laws will create the changes you desire.

We recently had an urgent message to double our prayer time to become immune to and not get caught up in the darkness that is fast encroaching on the planet. I'm doing that. When I'm awake at night, I also ask the angels to come close and uplift me – and they do it. We also had a message that said when the darkness gets bad, we will receive a dispensation of being taken up into the spirit realm every night to make sure we get rest and respite from the daily chaos.

In the face of difficulties, gratitude can go a long way. During the Rwandan genocide some years ago, survivor Immaculée Ilibagiza has inspired many people with her story. There are numerous You-Tube presentations of her incredible experience, and she has even written a book about it. The excerpt below illustrates how in the direst and darkest of circumstances, she learned to thank God for the tiniest blessings in her ordeal. She wrote:

“When I was growing up, I was taught we must always be grateful and thank God for the good things we had. I was told, we must always find something to thank God for, even in bad times. For me, this became an especially valuable lesson during the genocide when I found myself hiding for my life in a tiny bathroom for three months with seven other women. During those terrible weeks, killers were constantly hunting for us, our families were being murdered, we existed in a state of constant terror. It was a nightmare and it seemed impossible to find anything good to thank God for.

I remember thinking, “this is hell, there is nothing good left in the world – I have nothing to thank God for.” And yet somehow, the more dire and hopeless the situation became, the more I prayed...and the more I prayed, the deeper I searched within myself for something I could thank God for. At first, I could find nothing to give thanks for, but slowly I became aware of the blessings I had in my life – blessings like little candles of hope, began to lighten the darkness surrounding me. For instance, there was the kindness of the man who was hiding us, a man risking his own life to save us. And there was the rosary my father gave to me as a parting gift when he sent me into hiding; a precious gift that helped me to pray during the darkest hours of my life. And there was also the company of the ladies who were hiding with me. I found myself becoming incredibly grateful for all these little blessings God had given me, and that gratitude became a deep and powerful reason for me to give thanks to Him each and every time I prayed. The more I found something to be grateful for, the lighter my heart became. And despite the anger, hatred, fear, and bloodshed that surrounded me, I began experiencing moments of real happiness.”

A MORE PERFECT AT-ONEMENT (RON SHOEMAKER)

After I retired as a teacher, I went to work for Sam's Club in the produce department. When my schedule required me to arrive early in the morning, I was responsible for setting up the fruit and vegetable displays before the customers arrived.

One quiet early morning, bending over, arranging a fruit display, I had a vision. I was looking through binoculars at a beautiful nature scene and was impressed how clear and precise the scene appeared. Every line and color was in perfect focus. I remember thinking, "for quality, this is as good as it gets".

Then someone reached over my shoulder and ever so slightly adjusted the focusing knob on my binoculars. To my surprise, the scene that I thought was in perfect focus became clearer and more precise. How could that be?

I mulled this over for several days. Finally I understood the lesson I was to learn: No matter how perfectly I think I comprehend a truth, there's always the opportunity to grow and experience it in a more meaningful and personal manner. This is an invaluable understanding for each person travelling the Divine Love Path.

A few years ago, I remember some people in the community being concerned about the second withdrawal of Divine Love from humankind. They worried that family and friends, as well as souls that had not yet incarnated, would be cut off. This seemed cruel.

One of the messages James Padgett received via automatic writing addressed the second withdrawal of Divine Love from humanity. In Vol. 1, pp. 349 – 354, Jesus mentions that people have a free will but that "the exercise of that gift towards the seeking and finding of this Love seems to be a difficulty that will prevent a large majority of the human race from receiving this great redemptive boon." He seems to be saying that most of humankind will choose to devote their time and energy to other interests rather than seeking Divine Love and that the majority would not seek Divine Love even if it continued to be available.

Jesus continues, saying that in the near future the Great Soul's Divine Love will no longer be made available to humankind. "The privilege of obtaining this Love will be withdrawn from mankind; ... never afterwards will the privilege be restored." That sounds definite. He goes on to say that those who are without Divine Love "will be compelled to live through all eternity with only their natural love."

Jesus then adds a few more thoughts concerning the first parents. He reminds us that they had "only the natural love that belonged to their creation as human beings, ... They were mortals, and when temptation came to them, the love that they possessed was not able to resist it, and they succumbed. He continues: "Even in that condition he may be able to resist all temptations ..., yet he will always be subject to fall from his state of happiness."

In Vol. 2, pp.184-185, John comments that "we must work until the great day of the consummation of the Kingdom arrives, and spirits who have not on the wedding garments shall suffer the doom of the second death. ... While the Kingdom is open for men to enter we must work, for when its doors shall be closed the work of the angelic laborer must cease, and men and spirits be left to an eternity in the spiritual spheres.”

On pp. 273-275, Ann Rollins makes the point that “God intended, when He rebestowed this love, that every human being, as well as spirit, should have the opportunity to obtain it. ... The second death will take place when that great separation occurs, and the gift of this privilege of receiving the Divine Love of the Father will again be withdrawn from man and spirit. ... The only death will be the death that the first parents died at the time of their disobedience, which was the deprivation of the great privilege of receiving the Divine Love and thereby partaking of the divine nature of the Father, and immortality.”

Concerning the Celestial Heavens, Ann Rollins in Vol. 3, p 111-113 explains: “He did not intend that his Kingdom of which we speak should remain open through all eternity for spirits to enter and live in. ... At some time known only to God, the entrance to this Kingdom will be closed.” Then she adds, “it seems to me that they who come after the gates to the kingdom are closed have no right to expect that they are entitled to enter, for they are not born to have this privilege”.

From the above, it appears that through the Padgett years, there was an understanding in the Celestial Heavens that Divine Love would be withdrawn from mankind a second time and that after that, it would not be offered to humankind again. It was felt that most of humanity would not choose the Great Soul’s offer but would remain satisfied with their natural love and the happiness that they experience in the natural love heavens.

After Padgett's time, some 30 years passed before another medium was developed that could receive messages from Celestials. As far as is known, Dr. Stone had no guidance during this period regarding automatic writing. It wasn’t until the early 1950s that Dr. Daniel G. Samuels began to receive automatic writing from Celestials. During the years 1954-1963 – about the same number of years that Padgett received messages – Dr. Samuels received messages that were later published as 76 Sermons on the Old Testament of the Bible and New Testament Revelations.

It is important to remember that between the time that Padgett and Samuels received messages, there was a period of about 30 years. Jesus and His followers were already in the Celestial Heavens and as such were already at-one with the Father as regards the quality of their love, but not the quantity (volume). During the period between the two mediums, I think it is safe to assume that they all had continued to pray and receive more of God’s Love. They would have grown and become in greater at-onement with the Great Soul. This would have enabled the truths they understood to come into clearer focus resulting in new insights and a more complete understanding.

Keeping this in mind, in Revelation 3 of the New Testament Revelations, Jesus writes that after the first parents’ fall, “man’s condition became such when sin entered that the Divine Love could not be sought for in that, in his pride and independence, he willed that it should be removed as an indication of God’s protecting influence. ... He showed God that he did not want God’s help in his progress through life as a mortal and when he came to the spirit world, the same sense of independence of God was evidenced.” The first parents didn’t want to acknowledge God as their Creator or that they were dependent on Him.

With the withdrawal of Divine Love, it becomes evident that receiving Divine Love is not a right but a privilege that the Great Soul chose to extend to humankind. When it is withdrawn, it doesn't necessarily mean that the Divine Love "will be withdrawn from mankind for all eternity". Then Jesus says something very interesting: "for actually this is something which has not been revealed to the Celestial Heavens as yet." So even for the highest-placed Celestials, the revelation of truth is an ongoing experience as they gradually become closer in at-onement with the Father in the quantity of Divine Love that they possess.

Then as if to emphasize his growing and learning experience, Jesus explains, "but knowing the Father to the extent that I do, I cannot believe that God in His great goodness and mercy does not have a plan of salvation which will permit all of His created souls the opportunity to seek At-onement with Him even though at the time of their incarnation the gift of immortality has been withdrawn."

As Jesus came into greater amounts of the Father's Love, he was able to point out that "it cannot be said definitely that at some future date in God's own good time the privilege will not be in some way restored after the second withdrawal". He adds: "And even though the Celestial Heavens will be filled and its doors closed after the second withdrawal, this does not mean that there will not be created another Celestial Heaven in God's realms." Writing through Dr. Samuels, perhaps to ease the tensions brought about by the possible withdrawal of the Divine Love, Jesus explains: "For the age in which you and the Doctor (Stone) live, and for a certain number of centuries to come, this gift will continue to flow from the source of the Father's Being."

Then, in what seems like a moment of speculation, knowing the Father as he does, Jesus envisioned the possibility that the Divine Love may be made available to humankind for a time and be withdrawn in an ebb and flow action – not unlike the waves of the ocean. This may continue as the Father desires.

In the Celestial Heavens, the revelation of truth depends not only on the quality but also on the quantity of Divine Love an individual possesses. Jesus explains in Revelation 8: "We in the Celestial Heavens realize that we do not know all the truths of God, but that we shall continue to learn them throughout all eternity, as increased portions of Divine Love are conveyed into our souls with prayer, and we are humble and grateful that the opportunity has been afforded us by the loving kindness and mercy of the Father."

In conclusion, showing that even Jesus continues to grow in understanding, he wrote, "as I obtained more and more Divine Love in my soul I was progressively the more capable of receiving and understanding the truths which the Father instructed me regarding His nature, His attributes and my mission on Earth."

NOT BEING A BYSTANDER IN YOUR OWN LIFE (COLIN MACKAY)

Love is the highest expression of consciousness. It is the creative power behind all that exists, other than what humans create through negativity. As we become ever more loving, we fulfill the purpose of our existence.

Divine Love – the highest form of love – is entirely non-material, but it intermingles with and saturates all the physical space in our universe and beyond. This love is accessible to our soul. When our soul has been transformed by Divine Love in response to our prayers, the door to a higher dimension opens and, after we leave this world, we can step into the Celestial Realm of the spirit world.

Divinity acquired through the Divine Love transforming our soul is free for the asking. But for many, these great truths seem highly improbable, so it is easier to reject them than to accept them. Living solely within the highly localized consciousness represented by our material mind is a freewill choice that seriously restricts our ability to receive the many blessings that God wants to shower on us.

As we progress on the Divine Love path, less and less of the fruits of that journey can be recognized by the perceptions of the material mind. What exists in a higher dimension is invisible to the mind, but not to the developing soul. At some point, the material mind becomes irrelevant, except as we use it to deal with worldly affairs. For the mind to become a mere bystander in our life is a situation that few can easily accept.

The reality that we aren't our mind can sometimes be accepted conceptually but rarely is it accepted and experienced as fact. We, as a soul, stop being a bystander when we step into divine awareness, which exists only in the soul mind. The material mind plays a role when the soul initiates the divine journey, since the will must be directed to the process of praying and other activities that secure us on the path. Thereafter, it becomes increasingly irrelevant to the process, as the soul mind comes into ascendancy.

Our soul knows the physical body will die and is indifferent to that fact. Its own existence is unaffected. This shows that the part of our consciousness that in many people is terrified of dying has somehow split off from the soul. At least it appears to have done so when viewed from the perspective of the material mind. But the soul encompasses the material mind, which is just an adjunct, something our minds struggle to truly acknowledge.

The way to the highest truth – through Divine Love – is simple, but few accept it because they can't visualize what their undeveloped consciousness can't comprehend. That's why it starts out as a journey of faith. Those who don't invest a modicum of faith can never take the journey.

The idea that existence is no more meaningful than the mind subjectively decides it is, is an understandable, but incorrect viewpoint. Life is far more meaningful than we are capable of comprehending. God is not constrained to work within parameters that meet mankind's expectations. The purpose of Divine Love is to remove our spiritual blindness and open us up to experiencing the wonders of God's creation. As the Divine Love accumulates in our soul, it provides us with a new consciousness and soul perceptions that allow us to explore ever more of creation. Our spiritual guides, who are further along the path than we are, help us in this transformation.

For the spiritually blind to see requires a deep awakening within. Not just accepting some new ideas, however profound, but a deep remaking of our core being by adding a new consciousness that is itself pure love. This is what the Divine Love transformation of our soul accomplishes.

A CONTINUING JOURNEY INTO DIVINE LOVE (RON HENDERSON)

I am honored to introduce a spiritual book series drawn from a lived path of prayer, transformation, and the teachings received from Augustine through Al Fike between 2014–2025. This is not a series about religion. It is a journey of the soul returning to God. The following four books mark the beginning of that journey:

Book 1 – Prayer

The doorway opens. A return to true communication with God—not as ritual, but as living connection. The soul begins to awaken.

Book 2 – God IS Love

The foundation is revealed. God is not distant or conditional—God is Love itself. The soul begins to understand what it is seeking.

Book 3 – Compassion

Love begins to move outward. As Divine Love enters, the soul changes. Compassion grows naturally, reshaping how we see and respond to others.

Book 4 – Humility

The soul learns to align. Humility opens the deepest pathway to God. It allows Divine Love to flow more fully, guiding the soul into truth and peace.

Each book builds upon the last: Connection – Revelation – Transformation – Alignment. And this is only the beginning. Additional books will continue this journey—exploring deeper truths, spiritual growth, and the unfolding relationship between the soul and Divine Love. This is not a series to simply read. It is a path to walk. One step at a time ... one book at a time. The first book will be released sometime in May. If you would like a copy, please contact Ron.

The time is now ripe for the Truths to be made known so that mankind can be redeemed from the false beliefs.

I am here, John the Baptist.

I come because I want to encourage you to pray more and to believe. The Father's Love is waiting for you to fill your soul to its utmost, and the only things required on your part are prayer and faith. We are all interested in you and want you to get into a condition that will enable you to take the Master's messages as rapidly as possible for the time is now ripe when they should be given to mankind, and started on their work of redeeming men from false beliefs and erroneous doctrines and dogmas. I, John, tell you this, for I can see that men are longing for the truths of God - such truths as will remove from the teachings of the spiritually guided all superstition and errors. Such truths as will accord with the reasoning of men who are not biased by erroneous beliefs either in matters spiritual or material.

I tell you that these truths will be easier for the mere materialist to receive and understand, than by those who are bound by the beliefs which the creeds and dogmas of the churches have inculcated. And the acceptance of this New Revelation of the truths of God will be by those who have no preconceived ideas of what the nature and relation of man to God, in the spiritual sense, is, rather than by the learned theologian and the simple worshipper at the altars of the churches, who believe whatever may be told them by the priests and preachers.

As I was, at one time, the voice of one crying in the wilderness, I am now the voice of many spirits of God, who know that the Master will teach the truths of his Father, and that these truths must be accepted by mortals on earth, and by spirits in the spirit world in order that they may receive that salvation which the Father has prepared for them, and which, when accepted and realized and possessed, will fit them to become partakers of the happiness and immortality which the Father has promised them.

I have written you in this manner tonight, because I want you to realize more fully and deeply the important work which the Master has selected you to do, and also the necessity of continuing this work at the earliest possible moment.

Well, I have been interested in the great amount of discussion on that point, and how the belief one way or the other has caused those calling themselves Christians to form distinct sects. If they only knew or would know, that it does not make a particle of difference to their soul's salvation, whether Jesus was immersed or sprinkled, they would not let the bitter feeling arise that frequently does in discussing this matter.

But to settle this dispute to the satisfaction of those who may read the book which you may publish and believe in its statements, I will say, that when I baptized Jesus, I went with him into the water and then took the water in my hands and placed it on his head - there was no immersion.

As this water was merely symbolical of the washing away of sin and error, and does not actually accomplish that great necessity, in order for men to become one with God, it did not make any difference whether the recipient of baptism was immersed or sprinkled.

It is strange that many men who profess to have received the forgiveness of their sins and become reconciled to God should let a trifling thing of this kind cause so much strife and bitter disputations.

I will now stop.
